A Flexible Fix

In impoverished Newark, NJ, where fewer than one in four students graduates high school, almost 100 percent of kids at St. Benedict's Prep go directly to college. Although academic requirements are stringent, the headmaster sums up the school's philosophy in a single word: flexibility.

Meet the monks of Newark Abbey who sustain this remarkable story of success and see how their ingenious application of the sixth-century rule of St. Benedict may serve as a model for schools nationwide.
